

LINDSAY'S WEDDING DAY

Despite the obvious clue in the title of the tune LINDSAY'S WEDDING DAY, the provenance of the piece has proved difficult to investigate. We discovered that the tune existed early in our research but it was the last piece of music to be sourced. Dan Finlay found the manuscript for us and there is no other reported evidence of any other copies.

It may be that as a bespoke tune this one did not receive the usual distribution which most of Alex's compositions enjoyed. The original music was badly faded and would not scan sufficiently well to show here. In addition there is no date on the original which would have helped us determine when the tune was written.

This leaves us for the moment with more questions than answers! We can only hope that someone will have a "light bulb moment" and share with us any information they might recall about a bride called Lindsay.

We would place on record that we remain hopeful that there are more of Alex's tunes which we have yet to find.
